

Author: Isaac Terry

Date Created: 7/24/2015

About: This document contains screenshots of my attempt to alter The New York Times homepage using Google's Chrome Developer Tools. Each page below contains two screenshots. The first is before the modifications and the second comes after the modifications. The description of the modifications is given at the bottom each page.

Time Spent: Approximately $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours. This includes editing with Dev Tools and creating this document.

Summary: Deleted or modified the names/links of different sections of The New York Times. Removed "Search" at the upper-left hand side of the webpage. At the top and center of the page, I modified the height and width of The New York Times logo image.

Two screenshots of a web browser displaying the New York Times website, illustrating CSS modifications.

Top Screenshot: The browser shows the New York Times homepage. The article "China's Global Desires, Loans and Strings Attached" is highlighted. The browser's developer tools are open, showing the "Elements" panel with the following HTML structure:

```
<button class="button sections-button enable-ally">

  My Sections
</button>
Skip to content
Skip to navigation

```

The "Styles" panel shows the following CSS rules:

```
element.style {
}
media="screen"
.masthead .quick-navigation
.button {
  float: left;
}
```

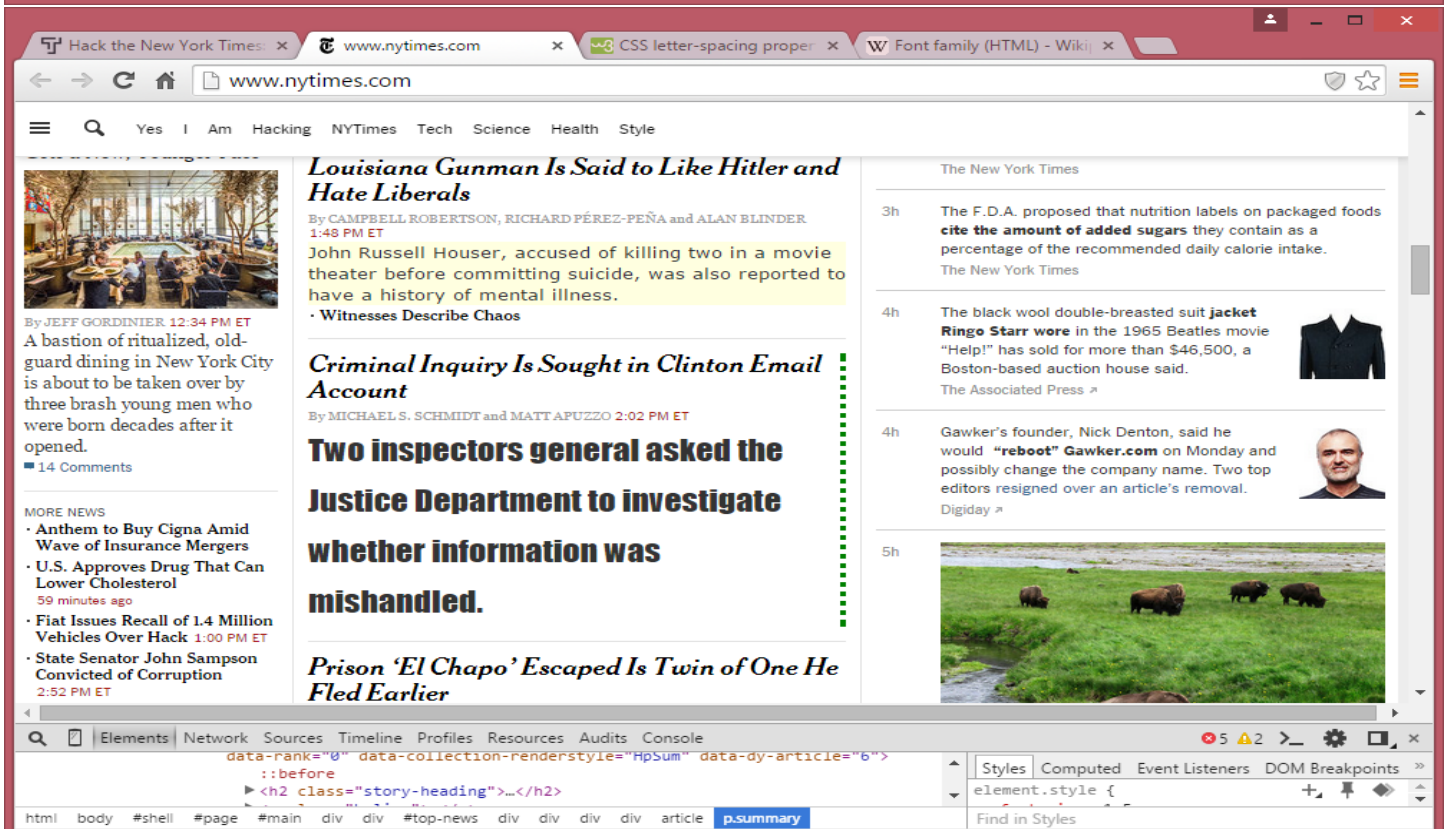

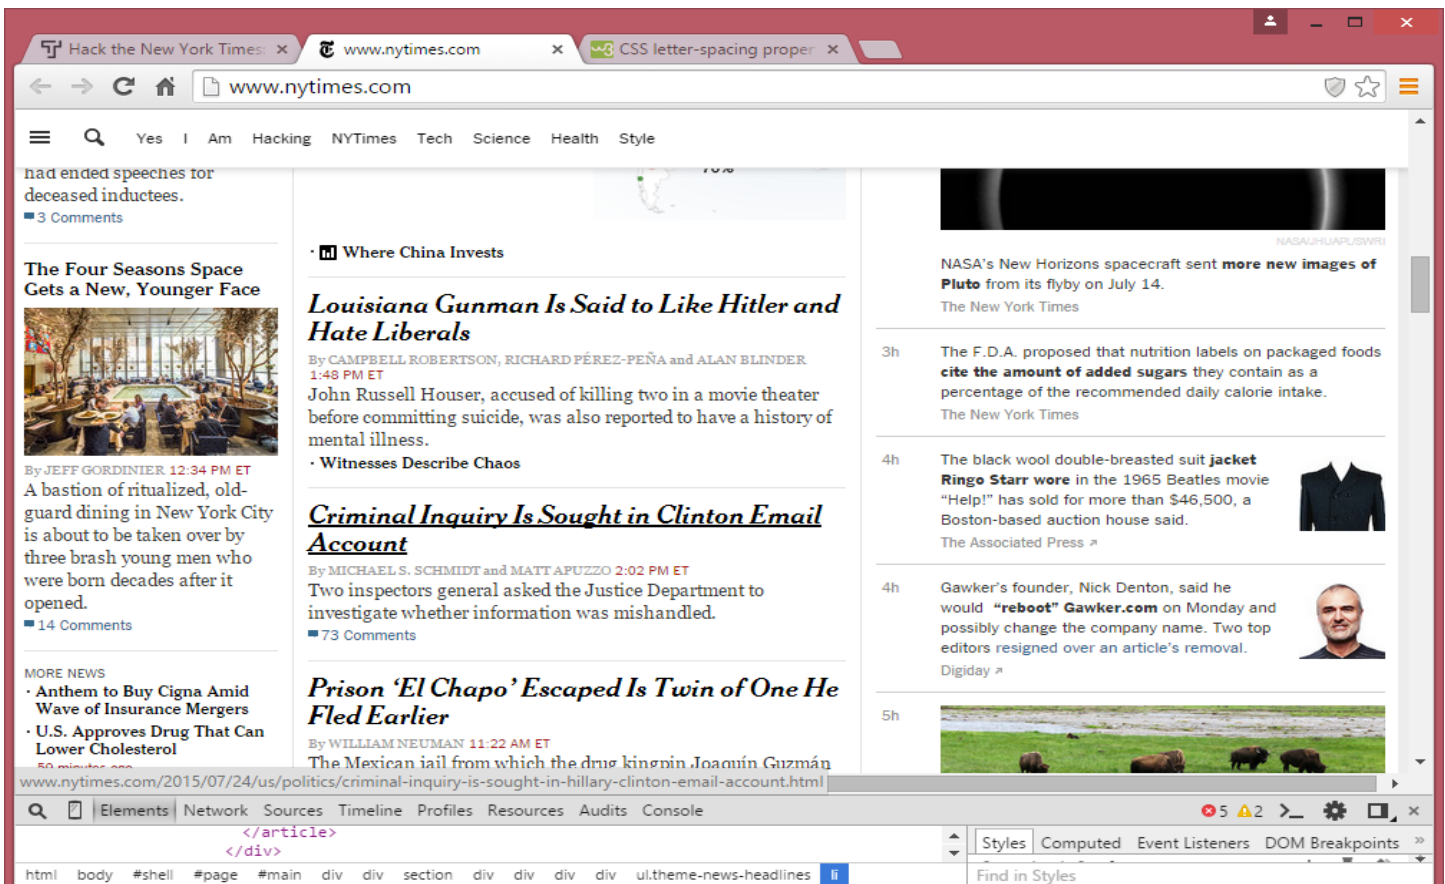

Bottom Screenshot: The browser shows the same page with additional CSS modifications. The article "Confederate Memorials as Instruments of Racial Terror" is highlighted. The browser's developer tools are open, showing the "Elements" panel with the following HTML structure:

```
</article>

```

The "Styles" panel shows the following CSS rules:

```
html body #shell #page #main div div section div div div div ul.theme-news-headlines
```

Summary: The summary of the article titled China's Global Desires, Loans and Strings Attached is given a new location on the website, and the font color for the authors of the article is modified. The letter spacing is modified in a title of an article within the section The Opinion Pages. Within that same section, the article title Brooks: The Minimum-Wage Muddle is modified to be aligned to the right.

Summary: In the article titled Louisiana Gunman is Said to be Like Hitler and Hate Liberals, I changed the background color and font family of the paragraph. In the article titled Criminal Inquiry Is Sought in Clinton Email Account, I changed the font family, line spacing, and font size; and I added a green dotted border on the right side of the article.

Hack the New York Times x www.nytimes.com x CSS letter-spacing proper x Font family (HTML) - Wiki x

www.nytimes.com

Yes I Am Hacking NYTimes Tech Science Health Style

Vehicles Over Hack 1:00 PM ET
 • State Senator John Sampson Convicted of Corruption
 2:52 PM ET

ON THE BLOGS
 • Public Editor: Taye Diggs Profile Kicks Up Some Dust

Prison 'El Chapo' Escaped Is Twin of One He Flew Earlier
 By WILLIAM NEUMAN 11:22 AM ET
 The Mexican jail from which the drug kingpin Joaquín Guzmán Loera broke out of is nearly identical to one he escaped in 2001.

Reconsidering Bonds for the Hall of Fame
 After more than a decade of chasing Barry Bonds, even the government gave up trying to pin the rap on him, writes Harvey Araton.

Miguel Thrives on Dualities in 'Wildheart'
 On his new record, the songwriter claims a specific identity as a California native of mixed ancestry and boundless aspiration.

Converse Dares to Mess With the Chuck Taylor
 The iconic Chuck Taylor All Star, that flat-footed, star-sided, toe-capped flexible sneaker, gets a new brother, the Chuck II.

Officials at Yellowstone National Park are warning visitors not to fraternize with wildlife after a woman was injured while trying to take a selfie near a bison.
 The New York Times

6h Federal transportation officials opened a price-gouging investigation involving five airlines that allegedly raised airfares after an Amtrak train crash in Philadelphia.
 The Associated Press

7h A court in Romania sentenced a Stalinist-era political prison commander to 20 years in jail for murder, the first such ruling since the Ceausescu dictatorship collapsed in 1989.
 Reuters

Send Feedback

Elements Network Sources Timeline Profiles Resources Audits Console

data-rank="0" data-collection-renderstyle="HpSum" data-dy-article="6">
 ::before
 <h2 class="story-heading">...</h2>

html body #shell #page #main div div #top-news div div div div article p.summary

Styles Computed Event Listeners DOM Breakpoints

font-size: 1.5em;
 font-family: Impact;

Find in Styles

Hack the New York Ti x www.nytimes.com x CSS letter-spacing prc x Font family (HTML) - x 756.jpg (408x500) x

www.nytimes.com

Yes I Am Hacking NYTimes Tech Science Health Style

Vehicles Over Hack 1:00 PM ET
 • State Senator John Sampson Convicted of Corruption
 2:52 PM ET

ON THE BLOGS
 • Public Editor: Taye Diggs Profile Kicks Up Some Dust

Prison 'El Chapo' Escaped Is Twin of One He Flew Earlier
 By WILLIAM NEUMAN 11:22 AM ET
 The Mexican jail from which the drug kingpin Joaquín Guzmán Loera broke out of is nearly identical to one he escaped in 2001.

Reconsidering Bonds for the Hall of Fame
 After more than a decade of chasing Barry Bonds, even the government gave up trying to pin the rap on him, writes Harvey Araton.

Converse Dares to Mess With the Chuck Taylor
 The iconic Chuck Taylor All Star, that flat-footed, star-sided, toe-capped flexible sneaker, gets a new brother, the Chuck II.

Miguel Thrives on Dualities in 'Wildheart'
 On his new record, the songwriter claims a specific identity as a California native of mixed ancestry and boundless aspiration.

Officials at Yellowstone National Park are warning visitors not to fraternize with wildlife after a woman was injured while trying to take a selfie near a bison.
 The New York Times

7h Federal transportation officials opened a price-gouging investigation involving five airlines that allegedly raised airfares after an Amtrak train crash in Philadelphia.
 The Associated Press

A court in Romania sentenced a Stalinist-era political prison commander to 20 years in jail for murder, the first such ruling since the Ceausescu dictatorship collapsed in 1989.
 Reuters

Send Feedback

uk.reuters.com/article/2015/07/24/uk-romania-trial-communism-idUKKCN0PY1GV20150724

Elements Network Sources Timeline Profiles Resources Audits Console

html body #shell #page #main div div #top-news div div div.column

Styles Computed Event Listeners DOM Breakpoints

Find in Styles

The Times Summer Sale Ends July 28

Summary: Changed lower-left image that comes before the article titled Reconsidering Bonds for the Hall of Fame. Switched positions of articles that are titled Converse Dares to Mess with Chuck Taylor and Miguel Thrives on Dualities in 'Wildheart'.

